FIRST-CLASS MATCHES

First-Class Matches are those matches of three or more days' duration between two sides of eleven players played on natural turf pitches and substantially conforming to ICC standard playing conditions.

A Full member may, if it wishes, introduce playing regulations allowing the 11 playing members of a side to be changed after the start of a match without the match forgoing its first-class status, provided any such changes relate solely to a player's call-up to or release from international duty. However, no playing members of a side in a first-class match may be replaced for reasons of tactics or injury.

In the following Rules the term 'Governing Body' is restricted to Full Members.

Rules

- a. The status of all matches in an official ICC competition shall be decided by ICC. For matches outside of official ICC competitions, b. and c. below shall apply.
- b. Full Members of the International Cricket Council shall decide the status of matches of three or more days' duration played in their countries.
- c. In matches of three or more days' duration played in countries which are not Full Members of the International Cricket Council:
  - i) If only one team comes from a Full Member country or both teams come from the same Full Member country then that country shall decide the status; otherwise
  - ii) If both teams come from different Full Member countries then the status shall be decided by agreement between those countries if possible; otherwise
  - iii) ICC shall decide.

Notes

- Governing Bodies agree that the interest of First-Class cricket will be served by ensuring that First-Class status is not accorded to any match in which one or other of the teams taking part cannot on a strict interpretation of the definitions be adjudged First-Class. Matches involving age-group teams up to and including U19 shall not be classified as First-Class matches
- Decisions regarding the awarding a match First-Class status should whenever possible be taken prior to its commencement, failing which as soon as possible thereafter. Where a decision regarding First-Class status has already been made, including in respect of all matches played prior to these classifications taking effect, any subsequent reversal of a decision (i.e. to upgrade a match to First-Class status or downgrade it from First-Class status) shall be permitted only in exceptional circumstances, and then only with the approval of ICC.

  - ii) If both teams come from different Full Member countries then the status shall be decided by agreement between those countries if possible; otherwise
  - iii) ICC shall decide.

Note: It is intended that List A matches will be those one day matches played at the highest domestic level. Matches that are primarily arranged as festival, friendly or practice matches and outside of any competitive structure should not qualify as List A matches.

The creation of List A, the definition of List A matches and the application of this definition to all limited overs cricket worldwide has all been the work of Philip Bailey of the Association of Cricket Statisticians.

Prior to 2007, all decisions regarding the classification of limited overs matches as the one-day counterpart to first-class status were undertaken by the ACS, with no previous involvement from ICC or national Governing Bodies.

Since 2007, ICC has been responsible for the definition of List A and has placed future classification decisions in the hands of its Full Members.

Therefore Full Members are required to determine which limited-overs matches played under their jurisdiction should be accorded List A status. However, the ACS will continue to maintain the list of matches it believes fulfil the criteria for List A with Full members advising by exception should they wish to add or remove any matches from this list.

In order to preserve the integrity of past efforts of the ACS and to ensure the ongoing maintenance of authoritative and consistent records, the following shall apply:

- a. No attempt will be made by Governing Bodies or ICC to amend retrospectively the status of limited-overs matches, i.e. the catalogue of past List A matches compiled over the years by the ACS will be allowed to stand.
- b. Governing Bodies will wish to ensure that their future List A classifications are consistent with (a) each other, (b) past decisions and (c) the definition of List A as written by the ACS and adopted by ICC.
